

Wilmington Plastic Surgery

by Morvil Design Group

Business Profile

With locations beyond Wilmington and services beyond plastic surgery, there's so much more to Wilmington Plastic Surgery (WPS) than the name implies.

For more than 25 years, the area's most established, board-certified plastic surgery practice has been serving a seven-county region in southeastern North Carolina. Along with its two Wilmington locations, WPS has satellite offices in Jacksonville, Whiteville, Supply and in Leland's Waterford Medical Plaza.

With its Supply location, WPS has had a strong presence in Brunswick County for more than a decade. In 1997 the practice also opened a Southport office, which it moved to Leland in 2007.

"Obviously, the Waterford location is more convenient for our existing patients who live in Brunswick County," says Mark Morgan, M.D. "It is a beautiful, brand-new facility within a medical plaza, so we are surrounded by other specialties. And because it is a quiet, more intimate setting, it's a great environment for providing one-on-one care."

While it's clear the practice is not bound by geography, neither does its scope of services begin and end with plastic surgery.

"We offer three stages of care," says Dr. Morgan. "The first is topical skin treatments; the second is minimally invasive procedures; and the final is surgical procedures."

Because WPS is a medical practice and not a med spa, Morgan explains, they can tailor treatment to the individual to get the results he or she desires.

"Sometimes the type of treatment required is more or less invasive than the patient originally assumed," says Morgan. "And for other patients, it's helpful to have a physician who oversees the entire continuum of care."

The five highly skilled surgeons of Wilmington Plastic Surgery—Dennis Nicks, Kenneth White, Charles Kays, Jeffrey Church and Mark Morgan—are supported by a staff of 48 in their six locations. In the Waterford office, Drs. Church and Morgan see patients for consultations and post-surgery follow-up appointments, while Morgan and Stephanie Kochanski, a nurse/surgical assistant with more than 20 years of experience, offer a wide variety of injectable facial-rejuvenation procedures—including Botox, Juvederm, Artefill, Perlane and Radiesse.

"This is an exciting time in plastic surgery because there are many more tools available today to optimize overall skin quality and to address a variety of cosmetic and reconstructive needs," says Morgan. "One of the most rewarding things in this specialty is to see people who have an issue that is burdensome to them, and to be able to help them resolve it so they can feel better about themselves. It can truly change a person's life."

Along with serving many new people in the Waterford location, Kochanski says existing patients who are relocating to the North Brunswick area are pleased to have access to these treatments in their community. She says the practice strives to individualize care, including keeping the office open until 6 or 7 p.m. to accommodate women and men who would like to come after work.

To take advantage of Wilmington Plastic Surgery's Leland location or to learn more about the treatments and services of WPS, please call (910) 509-SKIN.

Top: Stephanie Kochanski is a nurse/surgical assistant in the Leland branch of Wilmington Plastic Surgery.

Bottom: Drs. Mark Morgan and Jeffery Church offer consultations, follow-ups and skin rejuvenation procedures in their brand-new Leland facility.